In 1958, Ford began production of the second generation T-Bird which included a 4 passenger design and was nicknamed "Square Birds".
In 1959 they changed the styling only slightly & sales improved significantly.
The bucket seats and console design of this bird was a pioneering effort by Ford.
It successfully established the personal luxury concept for ALL of today's automobiles.
This was Ford's first model with a Uni-body frame, a feature that is now standard on most vehicles.

It is in 3+ condition and only requires some minor TLC to get it the rest of the way.
Everything works,
No significant rust (only a bit of surface rust on the frame rails & a few surface spots in the truck - all inconsequential - nothing is even close to rusted through),
Great driving car.

It is mechanically sound, the 352 V8 engine runs great.
The transmission shifts smoothly without jumping or clunking.
The exterior repaint is pretty nice (I think it was repainted to the original color about 15 years ago - just before I bought it) and very good quality.
The interior and exterior chrome has some minor faults but is great considering it is 50 years old.
The wide white wall tires are like new, in great shape.
Right now it has an exhaust leak in the pipes underneath - we can fix that easily.
Comes with a Ford shop manual.

You can own this fine car. It has given me many years (16+) of motoring pleasure.
I have, and have had, all of the old cars from the 40s & 50s. And, this T-BIRD is one of my favorites.
